

ROOSEVELT RETURNS AND IS GIVEN AN OVATION SELDOM EQUALED

The Mighty Traveler Goes Buoyantly Through a Long and Tiring Reception-Parade, Showing Lively Interest in Everything American.

The White Company Receives Unique Compliment For the Sturdy Reliability of Its Steam Car From Mr. Roosevelt and Family.

Theodore Roosevelt and Party in White Steamer.

After fifteen months' absence, exactly as scheduled, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt disembarked from the Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, Saturday morning, June 18, at 11 a. m. To the great disappointment of a large group of newspaper correspondents, Mr. Roosevelt absolutely refused, as heretofore, to be interviewed or to talk on political subjects, but his rapid fire of questions showed the same virile interest in public affairs as before.

If the welcome tendered by the vast throng may be considered a criterion upon which to base a "return from Elba," surely there was no discordant note in the immense reception-parade, nor in the wildly clamorous crowd which cheered at every glimpse and hung on his very word.

The incidents of the day in New York were many, but perhaps none better illustrated the nervous energy and vitality of the man, the near-mania to be up-and-doing, which he has brought back to us; than the discarding of horses and carriages for the swifter and more reliable automobiles. The moment the Roosevelt family and immediate party landed, they were whisked away in White Steamers to the home of Mr. Douglas Robinson at 433 Fifth avenue. A little later, when the procession reached the corner of Fifty-ninth street and Fifth avenue, Colonel Roosevelt again showed his preference for the motor car in general and the White cars in particular, when he, Cornelius Vanderbilt and Collector Loeb transferred from their carriage to White Steamers, which were in waiting for them.

After luncheon at Mr. Robinson's house, the entire party, including Colonel Roosevelt, again entered the White cars and were driven to Long Island City, where they were to take a special train to the ex-President's home at Oyster Bay.

The supremacy of the White cars with the Roosevelt party was again demonstrated on Sunday, when the party was driven to church in the White Steamers, and a group of some forty prominent Rough Riders were taken in a White Gasoline Truck to a clamor at the Travers Island clubhouse of the New York Athletic Club.

A Sample Of Suggestion.

George Chan, comedian and play-right, was praising, at the Lambs, the humorous value of suggestions. "It is funnier to suggest a thing," he said, "than to say it out. Play-rights should remember this. Suggestion, pregnant suggestion, is what makes really funny the little boy's remark to his father: 'Pa, if you help me with my arithmetic lesson tonight, I'll tell you where my hid your trousers!'"

A Grand Junction, Colorado, fruit grower, has invented a new smudge pot to keep off the frosts. The machine holds about three gallons of crude oil and when filled will last a long time.

As Artists See Some Models.

James Montgomery Flagg, the artist, during a recent visit to this city told a story of a young woman who wished to be a model to a friend.

"The first requisite in a model," he said, "is that she should be good-looking. One day a would-be model called to see me when I was not at home. Consequently she told my wife about it.

"I was calling on some friends the other day," she said, "and they saw me working my thumbs. One of them exclaimed, 'Oh, what are you doing? You are doing such beautiful things with your thumbs. You must go to an artist and let him see your thumbs.' And I came to see Mr. Flagg," she concluded.

"Later I had an opportunity to see her thumbs in action."

"What was it like?" he was asked.

"I don't remember," Flagg replied wearily. "Her face would stop a clock."

The Miser Of Safe Harbor. "Economy," said Daniel W. Field, the millionaire shoe manufacturer of Boston, who at the age of 45 has entered Harvard, "economy is essential to wealth, but by economy I don't mean niggardliness.

"Too many men fail to attain to wealth because they practice a cheese-paring and mean economy that is everybody down on them.

"They practice, in fact, an economy like that of old William Brewster, of Sag Harbor. William, you know, would never buy oysters because he couldn't eat the shells and all."

Responsibilities Of Parents.

The old-fashioned mother and the old-fashioned father have become almost obsolete in the large cities. Modern mothers and fathers have ceased to take their responsibility seriously. During the early days of the child's life the task of looking after manners and education is largely shifted to the schools. The education of children, consequently, has become more automatic, and, naturally, lacks the individual touch of refinement and breeding that can be obtained only in the home.

Few schools teach kindness, gentleness, courtesy, or unselfishness. Such qualities can be thoroughly inculcated only in the home. It is by the father making a chum of his boy and the mother a friend of her girl that the miracle of a gracious character can be wrought. If fathers would make confidants of their sons, and mothers confidants of their daughters, teaching them to share adversity or prosperity like partners, there would be less dissatisfaction and less extravagance among the growing generation. By unselfishness they would teach unselfishness; by kindness, they would teach kindness; by courtesy, they would teach courtesy. And the world would be the gainer.—Washington Post.

New Opportunities.

"I am opposed to social distinctions of every sort!" said the emphatic woman.

"But," protested Mrs. Crosslids, "a line must be drawn. Suppose you succeeded in getting a good cook. You couldn't keep her a week if you introduced her to your friends."

—Washington Star.

Undoubtedly.

"Do you think envy is inherited?"

"Certainly."

"But everyone envies someone?"

"I know it, and it was the same with the last generation."—Houston Post.

Suggestion on Etiquette.

Special care is necessary in eating fruit so that it may be done in as delicate a way as possible. Pears and peaches should be peeled with a silver knife, cut in quarters and the pieces taken up in the fingers, but if the fruit is very juicy it would best be eaten with a fork. Plums are taken up in the fingers and eaten without taking the stone in the mouth. Oranges are cut crosswise with a fruit knife, and the sections taken out with an orange spoon or an ordinary teaspoon. After eating fruit the tips of the fingers should be dipped in a finger bowl. The moistened fingers of one hand may be touched lightly to the lips. The napkin is then used to dry the fingers and lips. One should not lean over a finger bowl.—Mrs. Samuel Armstrong, in the Boston Post.

Suffrage Wouldn't Help, She Says.

Grace Falkner, one of the most prominent workers of the Pennsylvania Association Opposed to Woman's Suffrage, has been making speeches in various parts of Pennsylvania against votes for women. "Women do not want the vote," is her argument. "The women who would vote, should this privilege be granted to them, are those who would do as their husbands or the local political leader dictated. A good looking, soft tongued politician easily could get all the women mill workers from a dozen mills to vote the way he wished. As for economic freedom, the average workman would be glad to have his wife have as much of this as possible, for then his responsibilities would grow less and hers greater. Suffrage will not abolish child labor nor will it close saloons."—New York Press.

Tribe of Pocahontas Remains.

The announcement that a monument costing $5000 will be constructed soon in memory of Pocahontas brings to light the fact that the descendants of the tribe of which the historic Indian girl was a member still remain on the banks of the Pamunkey River in the wilds of northern Virginia. There may be found prototypes of the girl who saved the life of John Smith, and there is enacted each year a reproduction of that incident. The Indians array themselves in costumes and portray the scenes of the early times with accuracy. These Indians take pride in living apart from other Indians and in preserving the traditions of their forefathers. The tepee has given way to the lumber-built house and the redskins have come to live much as the palefaces do, but the legends of their ancestors are repeated with reverence, and the Indians try to live up to them. The tribe has 110 members.—New York Press.

Human Nature and Its Changes.

"Say, Jen," said Katie, the brunette, with white sidecombs in her hair, "I see Mamie has bleached her hair again. Ain't it terrible?"

"Yes, perfectly awful!" replied Jennie.

"She asked me if I would do it if I were she, and I said, 'Yes.' Don't she look perfectly dreadful—and it's getting streaked already. You could tell in a minute it was bleached, the roots are so dark."

"Sure. I noticed that!" responded Katie.

"And, say, did you see the rag of a dress she had on yesterday? And it's got streaked already. Looked perfectly dreadful, didn't it?"

"Perfectly dreadful," echoed Jennie.

"Well, she wanted a pattern, and I gave her one of that dark blue silk I had three years ago," said Katie.

"You did?"

"Yes, I did."

"Oh!"

"And the hat she was wearing," continued Katie, "did you get your optics on that?"

"Yes."

"Perfect sight, wasn't it?"

"Where did she get it?"

"Oh, down at the Moody's. I helped her pick it out," was Katie's reply.

"Why—why—here comes Mamie now," she continued. "Hello, Mamie, you dear, sweet thing. How nice you look—too darling for anything!"

"Yes, indeed," added Jennie. "You do look perfectly charming. Say, let's all go into Huyler's and get some soda."

And the three friends walked away together.—New York Times.

Variant Spellings.

Among variant spellings of names perhaps the most remarkable instance occurs in a deed of the year 1578, relating to the property of the Raleigh family. It bears the signatures of Raleigh, senior, and his two sons, of whom one has special interest as being the earliest known signature of Sir Walter. By the father the name is written "Ralegh," by the elder son "Rawleigh," and by Sir Walter it is written "Rauleigh." By Queen Elizabeth it was written "Rawley," as then pronounced. It also appeared in his lifetime as "Rawlye."—London Chronicle.

full almost to overflowing when it had six women in it and took every feminine heart because of its dainty "fixings."

"Am I not?" answered its owner. "Our house is pretty and effective and lovely for entertaining. But its big hall and parlor, its almost-as-big dining room, all three opening into each other and making up the whole first floor, didn't give me a single cozy nook. All of it was fine for receiving formal visits and for giving dinner parties, but when it came to chatting with friends like all of you, that first floor never worked at all. I am a woman who hates to sit in her bedroom. I felt I must have a place really, entirely and solely my own. But how to make one I didn't see until I was off on that trip.

"It doesn't matter what city we were in, but we staid three days at a most splendid hotel. On the second day I came across, by pure chance, this dear brass teakettle. I couldn't let it go, and I won't tell you how much I paid for it. As I walked out of the store, just hugging the kettle to me, I had an inspiration. I'd noticed an electric iron in my hotel room. I'd have a cup of tea.

"So I bought some tea, and then I hurried up to the room. It was then about 4 o'clock, and hubby was somewhere, selling some man about a million dollars' worth of machinery. I knew he wouldn't get back till six. I'd have my little tea party all by my lonesome. I was just hungry for tea.

"I took the electric iron and turned it on its back in a soap dish. I filled the tea kettle, put it on the iron that was upside down, and in no time at all I had water boiling. My, and oh, my; that tea was good!

"I don't need to tell any of you girls how quickly a woman's mind works sometimes. Before 'my man' got in—and he really had sold a big, big bill—I'd planned this room all out. It just came to me, and now isn't it the finest, most convenient place you can possibly imagine! I let hubby in here sometimes, though I generally 'shoo' him out. This is a woman's room, never to be profaned by cigar or pipe smoke, unless, oh, well, I do let him come in and smoke, late in the evening. But I always open the windows very wide the next morning, and keep them open at least a solid hour.

"An electric iron on its back was only an expedient, of course. I hunted around the city until I found this darling little electric heater. That's the only part of the 'plant,' girls. You see this table here. Well, in a moment I can whip away the heater, hitch on an iron instead—I keep one handy right in the table drawer—and there I am all ready to press out any little things that I feel I'd better not trust to Mary or Susie. I really do a lot of ironing up here, and it's a delight.

"I had this music cabinet downstairs. I really didn't need it there. It comes in ideally up here. I've converted it into a sort of little china closet, you see, for my own private stock of tea things. Of course, I've gradually picked up these cups. The tea service itself's an heirloom. My grandmother used it.

"You've already seen my tins of biscuits and sweet crackers in my cabinet, and I'll have you notice that these little tea packets contain nine different sorts of tea. Sometimes I like to drink one kind, sometimes another. I can make tea to suit every one's mood and taste, including my own. I tell you, girls, I'm getting to be a great connoisseur in tea drinking."

"As you see, I can make tea almost without getting up. It's the most 'comfy' way. I never have to bother to call a maid when I want a cup. Sometimes a cup is very delicious late at night.

"There's sugar always ready here, in this quaint little Japanese covered bowl, and about the middle of each afternoon it is a part of Susie's regular work to bring up this tiny, tiny pitcher of milk and one lemon sliced, and put them away in my cabinet. Then I'm ready for any visitors; that is, any one of my very best friends like you. We can be 'chummy' up here, as we couldn't possibly be downstairs. We can tell each other secrets that are real secrets."

"No, I won't call it a boudoir. It's a girl's den. Hubby has his own just across the hall. He gives me presents for mine, and I give him presents for his."—Newark Call.

A Burning Eruption Covered Her From Head to Feet.

"Four years ago I suffered severely with a terrible eczema, being a mass of sores from head to feet and for six weeks confined to my bed. During that time I suffered continual torture from itching and burning. After being given up by my doctor I was advised to try Cuticura Remedies. After the first bath with Cuticura Soap and application of Cuticura Ointment I enjoyed the first good sleep during my entire illness. I also used Cuticura Resolvent and the treatment was continued for about three weeks. At the end of that time I was able to be about the house, entirely cured, and have felt no ill effects since. I would advise any person suffering from any form of skin trouble to try the Cuticura Remedies, as I know what they did for me. Mrs. Edward Nennings, 1112 Salina St., Watertown, N. Y., Apr. 11, 1909."

Drifting.

It is unquestionably true that, notwithstanding the tremendous energy which characterizes so large a proportion of our population and makes of it a force to be reckoned with, there are yet many persons who are passing their lives in aimless drifting. The sensation for a time, at least, may possibly be one of pleasure, however profitless, but it is a pleasure that is all too dangerous to be indulged in indifferently. To be sure, there is something alluring, almost appealing, in the mere thought of setting our craft adrift, with sails furled and engines silenced, depending merely upon some stray breeze or chance current to bear us onward. The very idea of freedom from responsibility seems attractive to a degree, and yet it is the acceptance of that responsibility which first points our way through treacherous seas to a "haven under the hill." Those who are content to drift alone from day to day, blown about by the vagaries of fitful winds, seldom if ever accomplish anything worth while, measured by the standards of men. Into their lives comes no hint of the happiness of dreams realized; they prefer to dream those dreams without trying to make them come to pass, and imagine themselves happy building castles in the air.—Charleston News and Courier.

Choosing One's Work. This matter of choosing one's life work is one of the severest tasks a person has to meet. Many men do not find their spheres of greatest usefulness until middle age, while others never find it. Education ought to help one to find his true sphere. The "g" at diff many young people are easy about adaptability to too many things; they become what their fellows or instructors call versatile. The versatile man sometimes is the worst handicapped man. He can do a dozen things fairly well and he spends his time between them, scattering his fire, instead of concentrating on one object, a single purpose and learning to do that in the aggregate better than he could do each of the eleven.

The man who, with a bent for music, can play half a dozen instruments, is not nearly likely to play as well as the man who becomes expert in the use of that one. The versatile man is seldom more than an amateur, being kept out of the professional class simply because he has never learned to concentrate his full powers on the one thing. Young men and women must look out for these pitfalls. The only talent that ever accomplishes anything worth while is that trained along a certain, definite, fixed line.—Omaha Bee.

When To Kiss The Cook.

"Rita"—so Mrs. Desmond Humphries, the English novelist is called—was condemning in New York the frequency of divorce in America. "You Americans," she said, "don't seem to possess the secret—the secret, I mean of matrimonial happiness. Perhaps you might take a lesson from a city clerk I heard of recently."

"A friend of his, after visiting him at his home, said:

"Excuse me, Will, but how do you manage on your small salary, to have such well-cooked and delicious meals?"

"The secret is simple," Will replied. "Every day I kiss the cook and do all I can to please her and make her happy."

"But doesn't your wife object?" the other asked.

"Dear, no! she's the cook," was the reply."—Washington Star.
